

Average severity of deleterious alleles across genomic features

load_per_SNP is comparable across features | controls for feature size and SNP density | SAP panel (n = 400)

Interpretation: if exon > intergenic, each deleterious allele in exons is on average more damaging than one in intergenic regions. This reflects stronger purifying selection in exons — only milder exonic variants reach observable frequency.